News & Previews

p32

Yes, we know it's called news, but this is where you'll find the previews too (when we have them, of course) – kind of an 'up and coming' section, if you will. Perhaps we should've called it that thinking about it. Oh well, you know the score, so check out the news and, er, get finding stuff out. We've got Alien Breed 3D 2, another outing for the Airbus, plus all you need to know about a great deal of other stuff, including an update on the almost-here Championship Manager 2. Lovely...

Features

The Official Amiga Action 1995 Top 20 p10

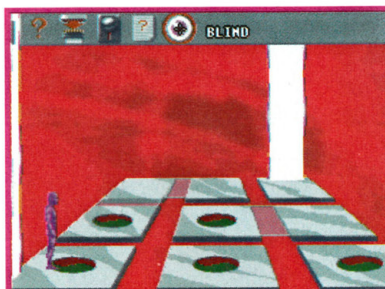

Well not so much Top 20 as Top 16, but the thought's there. And YOU can be too by turning quickly to good old page 10 and reading all about what made us moist in '95.

Game Guides

Son of Boggit p27

Something is rotten in the state of Bogdom, and 'Son of' is taking out the trash. Either that, or he's turning tail and running at the first sight of trouble. Plus: Monkey Island hints and loose talk about barmaid's charlies.

Flight of the Amazon Queen p22

It's a monster solution, but we're dedicated to bringing you the answers to those, er, Amazonian riddles. Frankly, we haven't played it much... but we know a man who has.

Coverdisks p6

Disk 1

WRATH OF GWENDOR FULL GAME!!

The second one in as many months. The 'industry' berates us but we care not a bit, because the all-new caring Amiga Action is dedicated to bringing you what the big boys won't – games. Club the evil things to death and save the good for the sake of mankind.

Disk 2

HILLSEA LIDO

A lido, it would seem, is a fashionable beach resort, or indeed an open air swimming pool. Got an idea what it's about then? Well you have to manage a combination of both of the above to the pleasure of your paying guests. Patrol the perimeters and get in the prizes for crazy golf. And remember, there's to be no heavy petting in the pool area!

Those of you who are hopelessly, clinically addicted to fruit machines (the ones we prey on by including stuff like this) will be able to breathe once more. It's the latest, and allegedly greatest fruity ever from those Mental Image blokes, so sod the kids' teas and fill that void in your life with a spot of bandit magic. Go on! You know you're choking for it!

You may have noticed some differences in this issue of Amiga Action. And here's another one! We thought that seeing as there is a distinct lack of good, new software around at the moment, you'd appreciate it if we could supply you, our readers, with much more in the way of coverdisks, rather than the blatant page-filling 'features' our competitor mags seem intent on providing.

This means that from now on we'll have three disks every single month. And, even more exciting than that, is the full game you'll find sellotaped to the cover of every single future issue of Amiga Action!

We've got some really big names lined up in the near future. Obviously we can't say too much at the moment in case our competitors decide to 'borrow' our ideas (not that we're suggesting they ever would of course!), but if you watch this space over the coming months you will not be disappointed. We guarantee it!

Cover Disks

Wrath

BPM Promotions

All Amigas with one meg

With Amiga Action's new coverdisk policy firmly in place, the first game to grace the front of the magazine is Wrath of Gwendor, a special edition for '96.

Highly reminiscent of the Sega classic Golden Axe, you'll be bashing your way through level after level of destruction, dealing out many a deadly blow to the numerous enemies that dare to cross your path.

Loading couldn't be simpler. Place Disk One in your drive and turn on the power. Within a matter of moments the title screen will be displayed in all its glory, along with several options.

Press F1 for a detailed run-down on the story and background and comprehensive instructions on how to play the game. However, if you're feeling ultra-confident of your gaming prowess, all you need to do is tap the fire button and you're off and running.

Just to get you started, we'll give you the basic controls. The game is joystick controlled with the directions on the stick corresponding to the way your character moves on the screen. Push up to jump and hit the fire button to swing your club at the enemies that come scurrying up to you. Be careful though, some of them will take more than one hit before dying, so don't assume that as soon as you've cracked one it won't come back at you for another go.

This is another game programmed by BPM using their own Reality software construction kit, details of which are on the title screen. For more information contact them at BPM Promotions, 8 Magnolia Park, Dunmurry, Belfast BT17 0DS.

Duff Disks

If any of your disks don't work, we're sorry - it happens to a very small percentage. Slam 'em in an envelope and send them for replacement to TIB, TIB House, 11 Edwards Street, Bradford, West Yorkshire. That'll see you right. Cheers.

h of Gwendor

Hillsea Lido

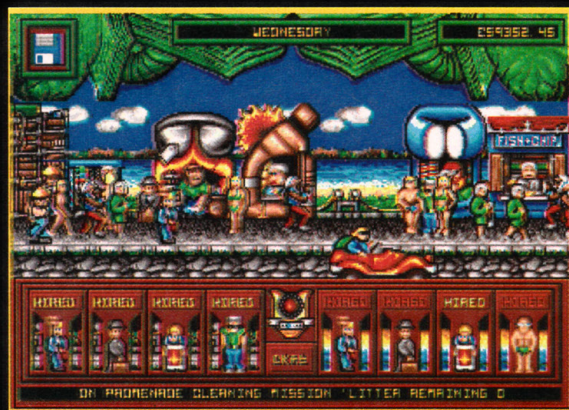

Vulcan Software

All Amigas with one meg

Again, loading the disk couldn't be easier. Just stick it in the drive, turn your Amiga on, and you're away.

The idea of the game is to run a successful (ie both popular and financially viable - aspects which are not mutually exclusive) promenade with loads of shops and stalls. You have to worry about such things as keeping the prices right, making sure the shops are fully stocked, hiring acts for the end of pier show (not in the demo version sadly), and ensuring that there are enough entertainments to keep the people interested (eg pedalo hire, donkeys etc).

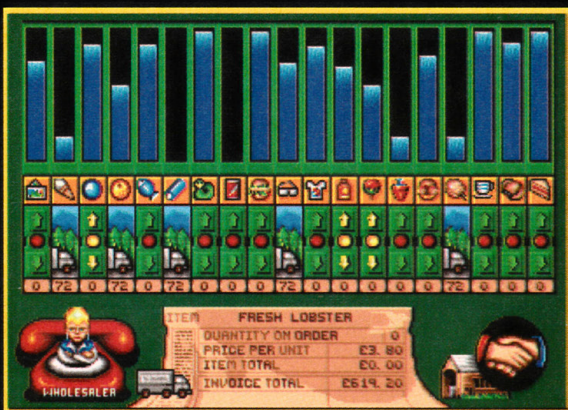

The demo is entirely mouse driven and utilises an icon system. This appears at the bottom of the screen and allows you to navigate the many different areas you'll need to visit by clicking on the pictures.

Most of the game mechanics are pretty straightforward and easy to understand. It's the business plan you'll need to come up with and stick to that is going to cause you the problems, and we're afraid you'll have to work that one out for yourselves. Sorry about that.

If, after playing our exclusive Hillsea Lido coverdisk, you fancy having a bash at the full game, you should turn to the news pages where you'll find details of how to get hold of it at a very reasonable price indeed.

Technology 2

Mental Image

All Amigas with one meg

This demo will autoboot when you turn the power on with the disk in the drive. When it's loaded you will be presented with a six-minute, fully working demonstration of Mental Image's latest fruit machine simulator, Technology 2.

All of the features of the full game are in here, including a choice of reel symbols, a quiz, and loads of hidden stuff that you'll be hard pushed to discover in the time limit set by the demo.

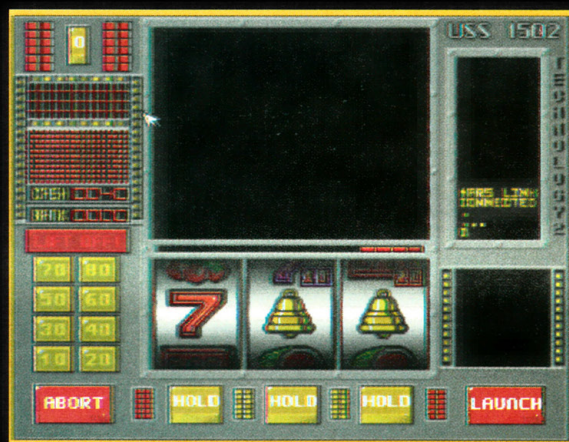

Seeing as we shouldn't need to tell you how to click the mouse on the start button and watch the reels spin around, we may as well use this space to tell you how to order the full version, should you be impressed by this demo.

It'll set you back £6 including posting and package (+ £1.50 for overseas), and you should make your cheques/postal orders payable to MENTAL IMAGE and send them to:

Mental Image, 16 Mile End Avenue
Hatfield, Doncaster, South Yorkshire
England DN7 6AU

or email Paul@Mental.demon.co.uk for more details.

We have also been asked to point out that Mental Image games are not released into the Public Domain, and would the many PD companies currently selling these games illegally please refrain from doing so. Thankyou. Just passing on a message.

THE OFFICIAL AMIGA

17. THE SPERIS LEGACY

Team 17

With apparent Amiga abandonment no longer a threat as we await the sequel to Alien Breed 3D, Team 17 enjoyed a strong 1995. The Speris Legacy (originally promised for the middle of last year, then completed, then not released, and even now only just on the verge of hitting the shops), is a Nintendo tribute which Zelda himself might fail to distinguish from himself if he looked into a mirror. But that's okay, because with its lush graphics and massive long-term appeal, this is definitely one to remember.

16. SUPER STREET FIGHTER II

US Gold

US Gold made a brief reappearance on the Amiga last year with what, on the face of it, was a disaster looking for a place to happen. The original conversion of the hit coin-op left most people cold, and it was always going to be a struggle to win over the masses with a game which offered even more at the arcade. Surprisingly though, it was a success. The moves and new characters remain intact, and the whole affair has an excellent solid feel, despite a process of laborious disk swaps.

15. SENSIBLE GOLF

Virgin

Claims from lesser Amiga magazines that this game marked a demise in the standard of Sensible Software products are scorned here at Amiga Action. For three straight days the office came to a standstill as we trawled through bunkers and over trees in search of that elusive birdie. Tiny graphics in the Sensible style, and slightly inflexible gameplay – which is overlooked when the game as a whole is played and enjoyed – didn't detract from the golfing fun.

14. TURBO TRAX

Kompart

Another effort for which the transition from finished product to available-to-buy game was a long one. Turbo Trax set the pace for overhead racers early in the year, and was programmed by Arcane Software, who later did something else which we now can't remember. Its challenging tracks and slick, bright graphics are... well, challenging and slick. And bright. Good traction, great control, excellent game.

13. MAN UTD: THE DOUBLE

Krisalis

The boys from Rotherham will want to be jumping on the Toon Army bandwagon if they're to continue their endorsement of the Premiership Champions, but in '95, United's glory was still fresh in the mind and Krisalis brought out the second of its 'new breed' of MUFC games. Using the same game engine as Premier League Champions, the viewpoint was slewed into isometry and an editor included. It plays as well as its predecessor, looks even better, and was the only football game of note in the barren year that was '95.

12. LEADING LAP

Kompart

The first game from Kellion Software – a multimedia outfit with an impressive list of credits – Leading Lap took us back to basics in the world of computer racing and brought back our great mate the polygon.

Slick on a standard A1200 and greased lightning on anything more, the impressive tracks and controllable cars make for a top behind-the-driver experience, and there is the added bonus of a cable-linked duel mode for drivers who like to inflict pain. Unfortunately, with things as they are in Amigaland, it deserves to sell more than it probably will.

11. ODYSSEY

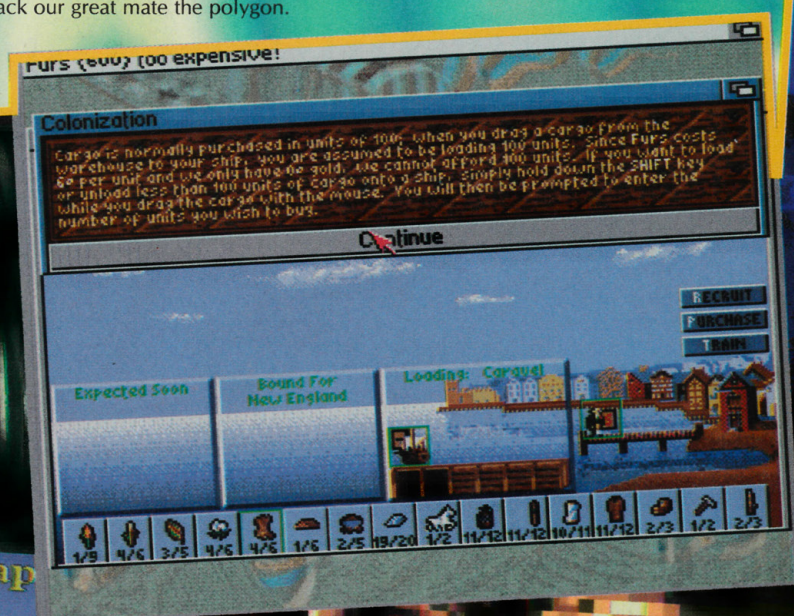

Audiogenic

A year in the life of the Amiga just wouldn't be the same without a sterling effort from the stalwarts at Audiogenic. Bubble 'n' Squeak missed out in last year's list due to the sheer amount of good games on offer, but this time there's been no holding back! Odyssey is like Flashback in that it's a thinking man's platform game and requires a touch more skill than your average left to right bash. It looks good, it plays well and it's challenging.

10. SUPER TENNIS CHAMPS

Audiogenic

In a spartan sporting year on the Amiga, Super Tennis Champs is a breath of fresh air that you will almost certainly never grow tired of – and never mind that it shamelessly borrows almost every element from Super Tennis on the SNES. [Whereas it should alter the rules of the game, presumably...?]. Complete with a season mode in which you can take part in the four grand slam tournaments, it will even appeal to the loners amongst you because the one-player option is – unusually – first rate.

ACTION TOP 20 OF 1995

9. VIROCOPI

Time Warner

A game from the famous Graftgold stable rarely brings anything but a smile, and Virocop is no exception. Part platform game, part shoot'em-up, and 100% action all the way, it's the kind of effort which goes down a treat on any format – and we had it first! Massive levels and loads to do make it a bitch to finish, but those who bought it didn't much care, 'cos it's great. Platformer of the year, and would have been even if there had been more than the two decent efforts we had, probably. Although it's difficult to say, obviously...

8. FLIGHT OF THE AMAZON QUEEN

Time Warner

As the big boys bow out on the Amiga and the minnows attempt to fill their shoes, perhaps the saddest thing is that we'll never see the likes of high cost games such as Monkey Island again. Flight of the Amazon Queen then, should be purchased, and as fable dictates, have the most made out of it. Excellent puzzles on a graphical set the likes of which we rarely see any more, backed up by dialogue which, whilst not exactly Tarantino-esque, is at least bearable, make this a must for adventurers. Hope you've got a hard drive...

7, 6 & 5 GLOOM, FEARS & ALIEN BREED 3D

Black Magic, Guildhall & Team 17

The long awaited Doom clones that you'd all been waiting for finally arrived in 1995.

Some were good and some were woeful, but it was virtually impossible to separate the three in this here list. So we haven't done. Or at least, we kind of have, and after much bickering amongst ourselves an order has been established, though the pouts remain on certain lips. Well no, that's not true, but anyway...

Gloom was first on the scene, and impressive it was too with its speedy movement and dirty great monsters, as was the similar Fears which appeared just a few short weeks after. Alien Breed 3D made a dramatic late entrance and proved every bit their equal and a little bit more, quashing rumours once and for all that the Amiga can't cope with this type of game.

4. COLONIZATION

MicroProse

Sid Meier was welcomed back by the strategists in 1995 and provided us all with a brand new treat in the shape of his true follow up to Civilization. An immense and involving struggle to Colonize (sic) and improve the New World, it's a game which can't be fully appreciated in just a few hour's play – it'll keep you occupied for hours once you're drawn in. Plenty of brainpower is needed, but it's more than worth the effort. A future classic, this one.

3. SUPER SKIDMARKS

Guildhall

Perhaps a poignant reminder of the depth of quality in previous years is that the updated version of 1993's number 13 in the Amiga Action Top 20 is surpassed by only one effort this time. This doesn't take anything away from Acid's home-made racer though, because as far as no-holds-barred genuine game excitement goes, Super Skidmarks is among the very best ever. A greater choice and an increased number of cars on new-but-similar slidy tracks (plus the inclusion of caravans and even motorised moo cows!) is about the strength of what's on offer, but once you've played it you know it's enough.

Nothing even comes close to being classed as runner up to this year's soon-to-be-classic number one game, so we simply haven't bothered with one.

1. WORMS

Ocean/Team 17

The truth of the matter is that by the time Worms finally arrived, most of us here at Amiga Action had long since become fed up of having it rammed down our throats week in, week out. We all firmly believed that Team 17 had wildly overhyped its game. How wrong we were. It lived up to its press 100% and quickly brought the entire office to a wild gaming frenzy not seen since the arrival of Sensible Soccer over three years ago. Basically, you have a number of worms and need to kill those of your opponent(s) whilst protecting your own. All manner of firepower is at your disposal, and worm-death can arrive in the most unsuspected manner. The graphics are cute yet largely unspectacular, but the sound is tremendous and the gameplay is the stuff of dreams. A worthy winner and a must buy for all Amiga owners.

ACTION REVIEW

RACING

Xtreme Racing

It looks like a cross between Gremlin's Lotus games and Super Mario Kart, but is Black Magic's Xtreme Racing fast enough to take the chequered flag?

STEVE McNALLY investigates

Black Magic, responsible for the inexplicably popular Gloom (in my opinion at least), has teamed up with Birmingham-based developer Silltunna to produce Xtreme Racing, a game which in all its reviews so far has been positively raved about.

I must admit, I'm always a little wary about these new development teams that seem to be springing up all over the place. It seems to me that because of the state of the Amiga market at the moment, programmers who could normally just about put together a sub-standard PD game are being snapped up to release their efforts at full price. And because of the distinct lack of anything better, their games are selling well enough to encourage others.

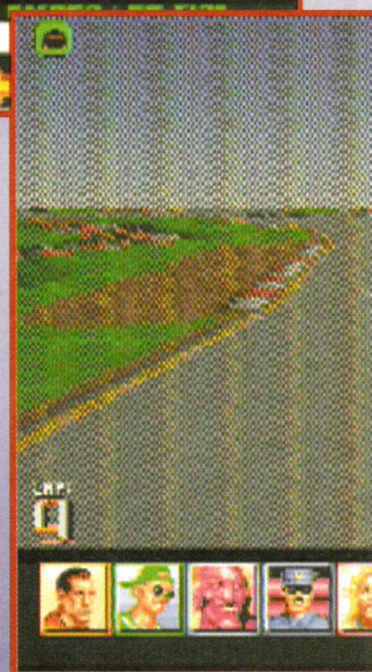

That's what I thought Xtreme Racing was going to be like, but fortunately I was wrong. In comparison with recent Amiga software this is a return to the halcyon days of '92-'93, when the Amiga ruled the roost as top home computer because the infinitely more powerful PC was just too expensive. Things have obviously changed drastically since then, with the PC on an ever upward spiral and the Amiga on a downward one, but this proves good games can still be programmed on our machine if a little bit of thought is put into the actual game itself rather than a fancy storyline.

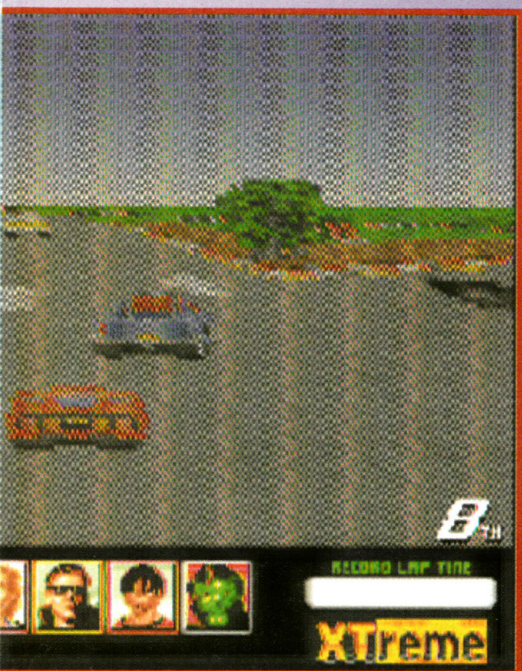

Xtreme Racing is simplicity itself. Just race and try to win. There's nothing more to it than that. Any development time has obviously gone into making the game as playable as possible on all forms of A1200 and up. The more powerful the machine the better it will look and the more smoothly it will run. Silltunna (which is apparently Swedish for 'barrel for herrings'. Hilarious eh?) wanted to make a game that would suit almost every player's individual tastes and machine specifications.

The default settings are set up to run quickest on the slower machines, whereas owners of accelerators and other upgrades (or even an A4000) can configure loads of stuff to take advantage of the extra power and make sure they haven't entirely wasted their money.

On a standard A1200 you really appreciate this extra effort, because it's obvious that if the detail and screen size were unalterable the game would be horrendously slow. The graphics are a little to grainy for my liking – it looks like you're playing through a fog. Either that or our monitor is very dirty. But in a game of this type, who cares. It's the speed and playability that counts, and Xtreme Racing doesn't disappoint on that score. There are options to race in cups, full seasons or a single race, and there's a choice of drivers, each with their own specific vehicles to hammer around the track in.

One of the biggest attractions though lies in the multi-player option. Invite seven friends around, get a couple of them to bring their Amigas with them, buy a serial cable and you're away – eight-player simultaneous racing action with an optional

Death Match mode which allows you to forget about the race and just go on an all-out destruction rampage. The number of people this will be accessible to is obviously limited, but those who can enjoy it will find an experience similar to that associated with a linked-up game of Stunt Car Racer, something which has rarely been matched to this day for sheer adrenaline-pumping excitement.

Xtreme Racing is good, even in one-player mode. It really comes into its own multi-player, but you can still get a great deal of enjoyment out of it alone. With decent games being so incredibly thin on the ground these days, I doubt that any self-respecting Amiga owner can afford to be without this one.

Despite liking it I think some people have got a little carried away with their scores for Xtreme Racing – 90% is a little excessive for such a simple game. Still, I wouldn't hesitate to recommend it to anyone, simply to gain the experience of playing a new half decent Amiga game on the Amiga.

ACTION REVIEW

SHOOT'EM-UP

With an excellent debut game on the Amiga last year, Binary Asylum proved that there was life in the old dog yet, if only someone was willing to put some effort into reviving it. Zeewolf was a helicopter action game of the highest order you could wish to see on any machine, and provided those clever enough to buy it with hour after hour of high quality blasting. And what's more, it never ever became boring! Occasionally frustrating, but never boring.

Frustration was due to the silly way in which the password system operated. You weren't given a code every time you completed a mission, but after success in every few, meaning that as you approached the end of the game [Callum finished it. He did you know...], time was wasted and fingernails were bitten to the quick. Not through excitement, but rather annoyance at constantly having to repeat the three or so missions since the last password was dished out. Thankfully, Binary has taken the time to alter this, and now the passwords are freely available after every mission – which is the way it should have been in the first place.

ZEEWOLF 2: WILD JUSTICE

Apparently, 'Revenge is wild justice'. Francis Bacon said that, though why anyone would care about the opinion of a weather man is beyond blast fanatic CALLUM DAVIS

This moan aside, there was very little about Zeewolf with which anyone could find fault. Sure, the graphics were probably best described as functional rather than spectacular, but Zeewolf and games of its kind are all about playability, and as it was flexible, easy to play and wholly enjoyable, it more than met the criteria.

And so now we have Zeewolf 2: Wild Justice – the sequel, and the game which Binary hopes will take its name to the forefront as exponents of quality games. The biggest and most noticeable difference is the speed. The landscape whizzes by at a phenomenal rate on the A1200, and in this respect even outshines the monster Desert Strike which, in all honesty, probably still ranks as the top Amiga game of this kind.

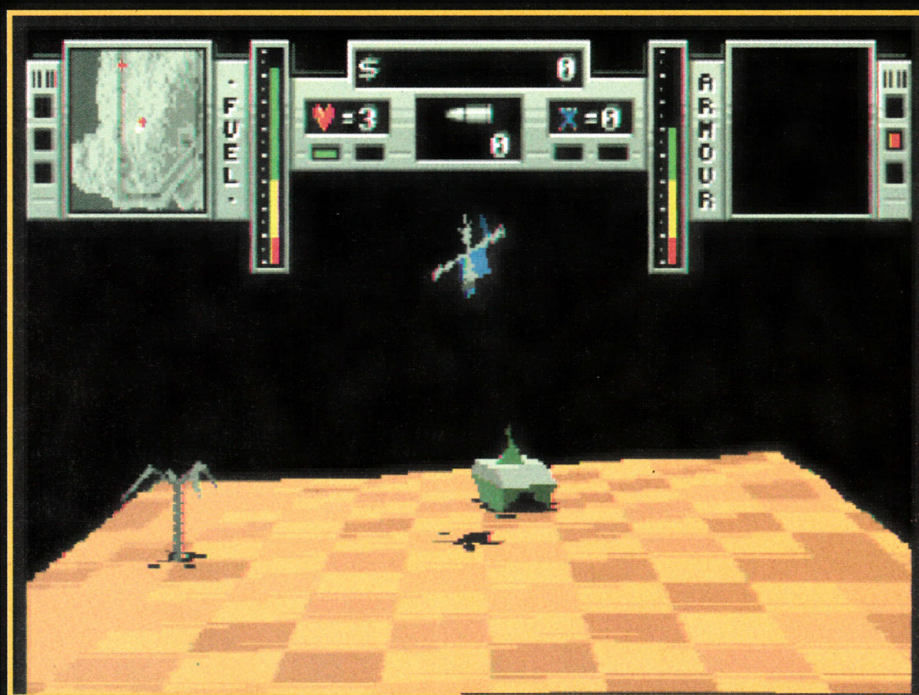

The landscapes are pretty much the same as before, only now there is a wider choice (four in all), with the barren arctic and a frozen toxic waste thrown in for added good measure. The detail level has been bumped up too – another factor which makes the new improved game speed all the more impressive. Obviously this greater speed means that controlling your chopper is slightly more difficult to get the hang of, but once you're firmly in the driving seat it becomes second nature. Once again you oversee the action via the joystick, and if you're feeling really clever, the optional mouse control provides even greater flexibility for the price of a few more hours spent practising.

Greater speed and smoother scrolling make destruction of the enemy (or whatever other covert operations you're instructed to carry out) much easier. But wait! It isn't easier at all, and this is because the missions are on the whole a touch more difficult than in Zeewolf, though non-experts should have no difficulty whatsoever in picking Wild Justice up cold and getting straight into it.

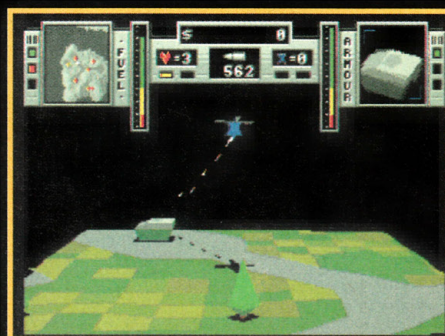

Having mentioned just a few short paragraphs ago that the biggest and most noticeable difference is the speed, I would now like to refute that claim, and state instead that the REAL biggest difference is the opportunity to control other vehicles in the game. A large and cumbersome transport helicopter, a small and nifty plane, a large and cumbersome tank, and a small and nifty boat can all be hopped into and driven about. They're only accessible at certain points however, and it is actually possible to make your way through the game without resorting to using them. But they're great fun while they last and add a new dimension to the game. Or half a dimension at least.

Now Wild Justice is a game of thrill and action – there's no doubt about that. But – moreso even than in its predecessor – there is a need here for thought, strategy, and at times even a little patience.

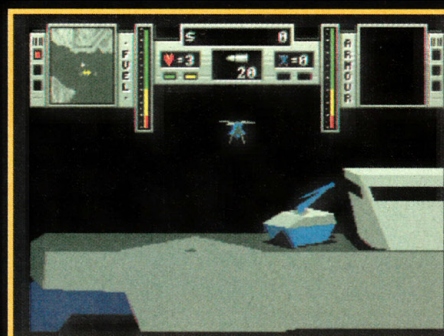

As the missions progress, importance is switched from random helicopter violence to eagle-eyed landscape scouring and deadly accuracy. The amount of weaponry you have at your disposal is minimal compared to the amount of difficult targets which need wiping out. It's a challenge,

A tank and a palm tree. You decide which poses the greater threat, and act accordingly undoubtedly, but it transpires that the slight frustration which we thought had disappeared from Zeewolf has in fact only been shifted to a different area of the game.

A tank and a tree. You decide which etc...

This is the biggest complaint, but it isn't even that much of a problem. In fact, minor, not-worth-mentioning niggles aside, this is the only complaint I have about the whole game. Does this mean that Zeewolf 2: Wild Justice is good? Undoubtedly so. Does it mean that the game is excellent? Well, you can probably work that bit out for yourselves.

Now then, where shall we land, hmm...?

First of all, let's deal with those who don't own an A1200. Regrettably, Zeewolf may prove to be a waste of your money because of the speed, and particularly the slow-down in certain parts. For everyone else though, Zeewolf 2: Wild Justice is every bit the game Zeewolf was and a little bit more besides.

ACTION REVIEW

SHOOT'EM-UP

Breathless

Still feel the need to blast numerous aliens into shreds? Well it looks like you're in for a real treat thanks to this latest release from Power Computing. Tell us more, ANDY SHARP...

After a host of serious releases, Breathless is Power Computing's first venture into the games world. Once more we're invited to take a stroll through a 3D world filled with aliens and mazes. More of the same? Well, yes and no. The first thing you'll notice using your A1200 without an accelerator, is that the scrolling is much smoother on a large playing window than with Gloom or Breed 3D. You may still alter this to your own preference to improve the scrolling if you don't believe it's up to scratch

Obviously there's the usual story of a future world ruled by aliens who transform the human rebels into war machines. These machines are then used in fights arranged by the aliens for their own amusement. If they progress successfully through the level they will be sent to the next arena to begin the subsequent battle. Eventually they will be pitted against the aliens themselves for the chance of re-establishing the honour and pride of mankind. So off you stroll into the battle arena to test your mettle in your own personal war.

What we have once the battle begins is another first-person perspective shoot'em-up, almost identical to Gloom, Alien Breed 3D and Fears. The difference here is that it just doesn't hit the mark graphically. The enemies look like skinny bone bags and they're tons more difficult to kill than those we've seen in earlier releases.

A target on the screen is allegedly there to help you see where you're shooting your weapon, but this makes no odds whatsoever as it fires dead ahead every time. Switch the target off and your shots will still fire in a straight line. Odd.

In all there are 20 battlegrounds to plough through, and these become progressively more difficult. There are 12 different types of enemy to blow casually away too.

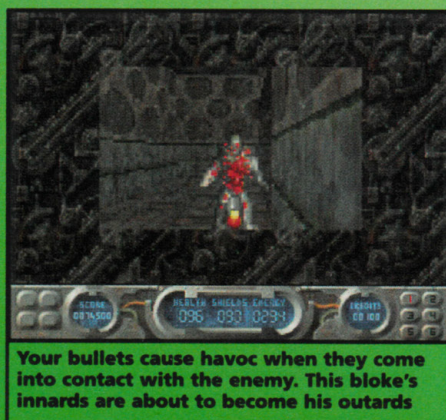

Throughout the levels you will come across computer terminals which can be accessed. These allow you to buy new weapons, energy points, shields and keys. The credits for these can be found on the ground and are scattered throughout the stages. Weapons, energy, health and shields can also be found dotted around the place, so there's plenty of opportunity for you to survive the furious enemy onslaught.

You begin the contest with three lives to use to the best of your ability. There are passwords available for a restart and these are determined by how much energy, shields etc you have remaining at the time. If you lose a life midway through any stage you will restart at the beginning of the same level, although any enemies killed will remain in their decomposing state.

The pixel resolution can be changed to either a clear state for graphical realism, or an incredibly pixelly affair to once again assist in the smooth running of the game.

The similarities between this and the other similar releases already mentioned (excepting Gloom) is that it is played on several different floors instead of one flat ground level. This works quite well as floors collapse and hidden areas are discovered.

Your bullets cause havoc when they come into contact with the enemy. This bloke's innards are about to become his outards

The screen's gone red! That means you're taking hits. Run away! Run away! Ah... you're already dead. Never mind eh?

What a sight this is! There's just time to congratulate yourself before setting off into the next level

Various helpful items can be found littering the floor on each of the many levels

Sound effects are as you would expect, with explosions and gunshots being the norm. These are optional, as is the music for the entire game. Breathless is at its best if the music is switched off during your battle, as the sound effects give you more of an idea of the intended tense atmosphere.

Breathless doesn't really push the first-person shooter barriers out any further, although it has to be said that the scrolling is smoother on a standard A1200 than in Breed 3D, Gloom and Fears.

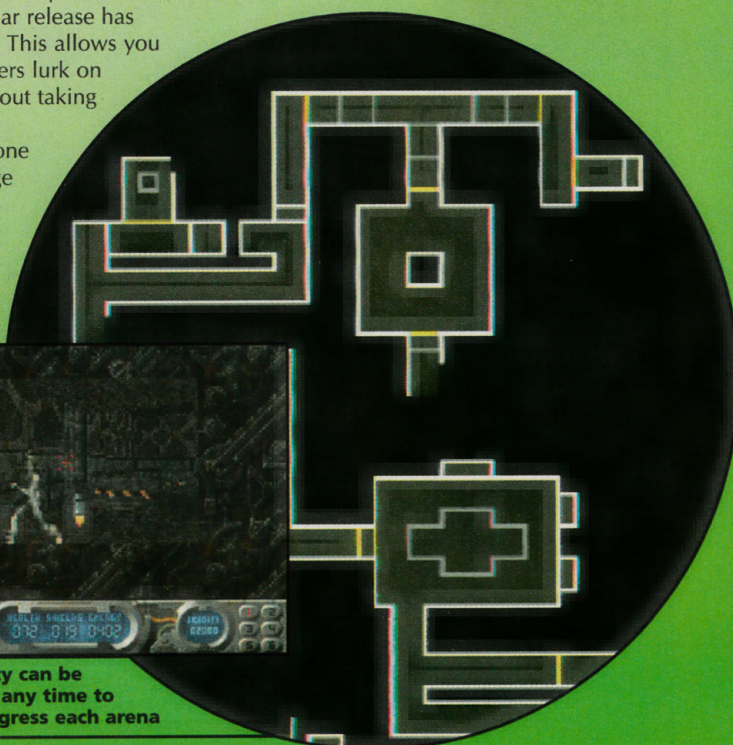

You can also look up and down, which is a feature no similar release has included thus far. This allows you to see what dangers lurk on other levels, without taking any risks.

If you're after one hell of a challenge then Breathless could be the one for you, simply because what appears to be the easiest stage ever could without warning become your downfall. The levels gradually increase in size and even the second arena on the first world is pretty difficult.

To prevent you from becoming wildly disorientated you can call up a level map which will show you the areas where you've already been and the exact locations of the computer terminals.

Although Breathless is a fine spectacle to experience, it just doesn't grab you by the throat and demand attention. Still, it's tons better than most.

The map facility can be called upon at any time to show your progress each arena

We've seen numerous attempts at Doom clones over the past six months or so, but Breathless doesn't bring anything new to the genre, except for the ability to look up and down. It is nonetheless playable, scrolls nicely and has more options available to you than Gloom. It isn't a bad game by any means.

Flight of the Amazon Queen

PART TWO

In the jungle not knowing what you're doing, left Joe reading a comic, carrying on from there etc. Loyal reader Craig Ilson has done the business, so all we have to do is the typing in...

Joe uses an unorthodox method to mend the radiator - strangulation

Right then...

Er, you'll see that a small portion of the comic is missing, as if a coupon has been removed. Use this with the soggy coupon from the plane to view the plans and code for the pocket rocket, enabling you to decipher Skip's message. Pass Bud and Skip until you reach a waterfall, then head east whereupon you'll come across the gorilla. Go south at this point and you'll come upon the missionaries. Speak to Mary Lou and find out how she communicated with the pygmies.

When you leave this place give a banana to the monkey in the middle and get a coconut off him. Insult the gorilla, who will whip his costume off and allow you to pass him on the path. Beyond the log bridge you will find some wasps buzzing around a flower. Suck them up using the vacuum cleaner, pick the flower and continue eastwards.

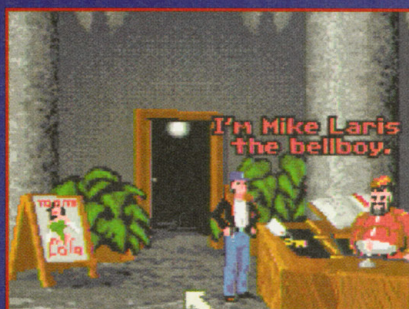

As you approach the carvings you'll hear a noise and make yourself scarce in a convenient hidey hole. Two women

Take a trip down the laundry chute to the prop warehouse

'Mmm, should I go for the towels, the crowbars, or the comedy breasts?'

'Hi Mike, you bearded, wobbling, absolute disgrace. You want shooting' appear and talk briefly before a stone slides across your hiding place, trapping you. This necessitates action on your part which will, unfortunately, land you in a dungeon type place, where one of the men present will give you a glove puppet. Don't worry though, as Faye will appear and release you because you are needed to rescue the princess.

Walk around the pool and go west and you'll be at the entrance to the castle. Continue and you'll find yourself at the pinnacle, when you should go to Trader Bob's. Offer Bob the flower you picked earlier and he'll give you a net in return, with which you can get the perfume. Go back to the jungle and give Sparky the beloved comic book in return for a file.

Go south and get a banana from the tree. Then go back to the pinnacle and into the jungle, heading east until you reach the waterfall. Use your net to capture the beetle and then go east then south to the missionaries.

Swap the file for the dictionary and go back to TB's and swap the perfume for the scissors.

You can talk to the witch doctor and will discover that she needs some stuff to cure rashes. Give her the vacuum and she'll extract the wasps, then give her the milk from the coconut. Get a flower from Floda and give it to the sloth, who will start to eat it. You can use the scissors to cut some of his hair off. With this, go back to the witch doctor for her to make the cure.

Go to the jungle and Bud will pay you for the rash cure. Buy a record off Bob with your money then go back to Floda and talk to the receptionist, telling her that you're the fumigator so that she lets you in. Walk north towards the library where you'll find some money under a cushion if you look in the right place [Ooh, thanks for telling us where it is mate]. Use the record on the record player to reveal a hidden lift. Leave this alone and go through into the kitchen, and after talking to the cook, give him a banana, which he will take away with him. Take the Cheeze Bitz and dog food from the kitchen and take the east exit into the dorms.

Open the mailsack and take out the letter to Private John, then open the locker and take the toy. Return to the library and get in the lift. Once you're down, open the first door into the warehouse. Take the tin opener from one of the boxes.

Walk up the corridor and give the letter you took to the guard, who will allow you to go into the rooms outside which he was standing [and presumably guarding, yes?]. Go into the first room and take note of the messages on the table. Leave this room and go into the other, and look at the roster to find out that the guard is guarding Frank's office, and that Henry is going to the kitchen for kitchen duty.

Outside this room you will meet Klunk who will tell you that he was created by the Mad Doctor. Carry on down the hall because he won't let you into Frank's office.

Go into the next room and tell the soldier called Henry that he has kitchen duty and that he should see Colonel Jackson. He'll disappear, giving you access to the office he was guarding. Use your knife on the book on the table to prise the book open and discover the key inside. Go back through the door and down the stairs, through the lab and upwards, and you'll come to a cell door. Open it to rescue Princess Azura, who will quickly become smitten with you.

Go into the foyer (the alarm has been raised by this time) and take the pencil from the vacant receptionist's post. Use

ABOVE: 'I've got a whole lotta love baby. And I want to lay it all on you'

the mannequins to hide yourself and then escape the same way the guards left by using a code which Azura knows on the panel.

The princess does one at this point, so give the toy you earlier picked up to the dog, who will be pacified as you waltz past him into the shed. You can't open the box inside so head back to the Amazon Fortress where you will be treated well, and given a special horn. Unfortunately at this stage Frank turns up and insists that Joe goes back to Sloth Island or he'll do nasty things to the Amazon women [Does this game have a certificate?]. Being a gentleman, you're forced to go.

When you arrive at the pinnacle, go towards the jetty. The ferryman has loads of interesting information for you, and if you give him the beetle as bait for fishing, he'll take you over to the island in return. On the island, go into the temple. You'll see a statue and some empty storage space, next to which there is an entrance, which you should go through. Move the bodies in the rooms beyond and take away the bones. Then go back to the other room and make a skeleton in the handy compartments. Put the leftover arm on the statue, put some money in the slot and pull the arm. Go through the entrance and you'll fall down the hole.

Leave the room you now find yourself

'Ah... I wasn't expecting you back yet. Er... I tripped and fell into the dress' in through the right hand door and head northwards. Cross the bridge and talk to the zombies until they open the tomb, then pick up the bandage. The women disappear, so open up the tomb and take the crown. Cut the vines with which to repair the pulley, then move it and you'll see a big drop, which you of course fall down. Use your knife to scrape some sap off the vine, go left and move the fountain head, then pick up the blue stone and walk past the lever into a high room, looking down onto a Floda trapped in a cage.

And just what happens next readers is a mystery to us all. Well actually it's not,

It's great to see the Green Goddess back on the television isn't it?

'cos Craig's a thorough sort of chap, but it's as much as you're getting for now.

Er... as you've probably sussed, these are the same grabs we used last month

SON

of Boggit

Where's the Boggit coming from?
From the treehouse where he belongs.
How did he get in this mess?
He's forgotten and you couldn't care less

The story so far
Following the imprisonment of his father for antics of a carnal nature with the daughter of fantasy land big cheese, Sir Cyrille Grimola, the Son of Boggit found himself on the trail of the Woonsocket Diamonds. These precious stones were stolen from Sir Cyrille by the evil Lord Albert Rankpants of Grundertrolley, and the law decreed that whoever returned them would be granted a wish of their choice. Desperate to secure the release of his father, SOB has managed to recover the diamonds, but has since had them pinched during an overnight stay at The Broken Bottle inn on the outskirts of Grundertrolley. All is not lost however, as an innuendo filled conversation with Big Lil, barmaid at the aforementioned hostelry, has lead to an illicit late night meeting and the possibility of turning up some vital clues in the case of the stolen gems...

My early morning drinking bout at the bar of The Broken Bottle had stretched long into the afternoon before I realised enough was enough. I would have to get some sleep before meeting with Lil later that evening so I staggered up the rickety wooden stairs back to my room and collapsed onto the lumpy yet strangely comforting mattress on my bed. I was out like a light.

I woke several hours later with a pounding head and a raging thirst. Falling off the mattress and cursing the brewers of Bra Buster, the lethal concoction I had been drinking all day in the bar, I dragged myself on all fours over to the sink in the corner of the room. There was a full moon casting its glow through the open curtains of the window, so I was able to successfully turn on the taps without having to resort to the light switch. I had taken only one mouthful of the cool liquid which was slowly filling the sink when I heard a knock on the wall coming from the room next door. I suddenly remembered my meeting with Lil, and knocked back in what I considered to be friendly fashion before turning off the tap and attempting to make myself look presentable for the night of intrigue which I hoped lay ahead.

I left my room and knocked quietly on Lil's door so as not to wake anyone else up. There was no reply, so I tried the handle. The door creaked open softly to reveal a moonlit room similar to my own. I could see Lil sitting up in bed, but there was something odd about the way she was slumped over to one side. As I moved closer a white object fell from her hand to the floor, and I realised something was desperately wrong. Switching on the light I discovered to my horror that Lil was dead. I tried to stifle a scream as I took in the agony of her contorted features and the red mark around her neck indicating that she had been viciously strangled. The window in her room was open, and the flapping curtains betrayed her assailant's escape route.

My screams had obviously woken the landlord and landlady of the pub, and I could hear footsteps making their way swiftly along the landing in my direction. Suddenly the situation I was in hit home like a hammer blow, and as visions of wrongful arrest followed by trial and subsequent imprisonment – or even execution! – began to fill my head, I decided the best course of action would be to leave immediately.

The object that had fallen from Lil's hand when I entered the room suddenly caught my eye, and without thinking I stooped to pick it up before leaping out of the open window.

DREAMWEB: It's a fact of modern life, unfortunately. You'll just have to live with it

I shuddered to think of the mess I had once again got myself into.

I am here to serve...

Lure of the Temptress

Q I have recently been playing Lure of the Temptress and I have got stuck. I am in the caves going to the dragon and for some reason I am not able to get past the second cave. I have got through the entrance cave but can't open the door in the second cave (I opened the first door with the skulls). Please help me.

Trevor Kiely, Co. Cork

A In the second cavern, look at the next set of skulls and tell Goewin to go back to the entrance cave, pull the left skull followed by the right, then return to the green cave. Pull the left skull to allow Goewin to enter. Now tell her to go back to the green cave and pull the left skull followed by the right. The door should now open, allowing you to enter the dark cavern.

Beneath a Steel Sky

Q I am stuck on Beneath a Steel Sky. I have got a metal bar, a spanner, an ID card, a light bulb, a cable, a dog biscuit and a pair of secateurs. I have a Schriebmann port from Dr Burke and a jammer on my ID card from the lady in the pipe factory. I reached the ground floor and Joey jumped and crashed. Then I joined the St. James' club, I found the museum, opened the door with the ID card and used the video cassette with the VCR. How do I get Colston to use his finger with the metal plate and how do I get Joey back?

Robert Fairfield, Dundee

A We were a bit long-winded there Bob weren't we eh? To be brief: Colston doesn't use his finger with the metal plate, you do after you have nicked his glass (turn the jukebox on first) and taken it to Burke's surgery. As for Joey, well, you don't get him back, but his circuit board can be used on another robot 'carcass' later in the game.

Dreamweb

Q Please could you help me on Dreamweb? I can kill Diana Underwood and leave the Dreamweb but then I am stuck. Please, please, please help me. I am desperate.

Chris Cousins, Bristol

A After leaving the Dreamweb, go to the church and find the altar. Examine this, then use it, then do the same with the hole in the floor. Now use the tomb. See how you get on from there Chris.

Valhalla and the Lord of Infinity

Q I am fed up with level four of this game. I have put two objects (a candle and a bell) on the bishop's shrine, but they have just disappeared and nothing has happened. What the hell am I supposed to do?

Jonathan Pardew, Leicester

A You should have found a book under a floor tile in the first room. It has a cross on its cover, and this is the third item that is required for the bishop's shrine. You will now be given the bishop's ring, which will allow you to solve another puzzle.

Monkey Island

Q I am on the ship I bought from Stan's Previously Owned Vessels. I have found the key to the cabinet and I've got the directions to Monkey Island and the cinnamon sticks. Please could you tell me what the recipe is?

David Teasdale, Teesside

A Put the following ingredients in the large pot in the galley: breath mints, cereal, chicken, cinnamon, gunpowder, ink, jolly roger (can be found at the top of the mast), rubber, and wine. The pot will become active and you will fall into a deep sleep. When you awake, you will have magically arrived at Monkey Island.

Well, that's it for now. Once more I find myself on the run, this time as a result of a crime I did not commit. I'm beginning to think my quest is doomed, but I'm not ready to give up just yet.

After all, there are still a number of questions to be answered. Who stole the Woonsocket Diamonds and where are they now? Who murdered Big Lil and why? What was the object that fell from Lil's grasp as she died? How the hell am I going to get myself out of this mess?

Until next time, farewell!

NO TIME TO WASTE WASTING MONEY

Dear Mr. Roundell

I was very disappointed to learn of your attitude towards students in the latest issue of Amiga Action. To suggest that students would waste tax-payers money communicating with other Net users on university equipment is, to me at least, most distressing.

I myself spend most of the week at the student union. You see, not only is the beer subsidised by the university (better than spending money on a new physics lab eh?), but the nice man from the brewery gives the biggest discounts to those establishments which buy the most beer. Therefore the more we drink the cheaper it is. Using this logic, my friends and I believe it is possible to drink such vast quantities that the beer becomes free.

But it's not all drink drink drink. No. Tuesday night is student night at the local multi-screen. We watch the same films from the same comfy chairs as lesser mortals like yourself, but – get this – we pay less. Brilliant eh? Apparently they make so much dosh from people contributing to society and paying taxes that they can let us in for a pittance.

Being a sporting chap I always like a bit of keep fit, usually swimming or maybe a spot of tennis. Just over the city is a shiny new sports centre. It seems that it cost the council a packet and the poor saddo residents will be paying extra council tax well into the next century to fund it, but as a temporary visitor to their town they let me go in cheap. How nice. I get there using my student bus pass you know.

Come the end of the week, the washing basket's full and so it's time to head for home, mum, her washing machine and a decent Sunday dinner. Thank God and British Rail for student travel cards.

So please do not accuse us of wasting tax-payers' money on the Internet. There are far more interesting things in life to waste it on.

You might think you're pretty smart "Edward", but I'll show you. Oh yes, when you gain a recognised qualification and get a good job, and I lose mine and end up on the street, I'll be there and I'll be SCROUNGING OFF YOU! And besides, I don't mind students too much anymore. It's the police I hate now. The filth.

AMIGA LETTER!

(BOO)

Dear Sir,
Does anyone else feel, as I do, that we Amiga enthusiasts have been badly let down by Escom? It brought the machine back from the dead after the Commodore fiasco, sure, but now seems to have left the A1200 in limbo – and at Christmas of all times!

While rival companies flaunt their latest computer stuff with massive newspaper and television advertising campaigns, Escom keeps the Amiga on the starting blocks and, it must be said, may already be fed up with the machine which it recently was so pleased to announce that it had "saved" from the dreaded computer graveyard in the sky.

If the situation doesn't improve I am seriously considering trading my A1200 for another machine (perhaps a PC) before it finally does die – something which won't take long if Escom continues marketing it as it has.
C. Burley, Dronfield, Sheffield

YES WE HAVE

Dear Paul,
I know 1995 has probably not been a vintage year in terms of the Amiga, but it is drawing to a close now and I wondered if you had considered running a feature on the best games of the year. Despite the lack of software releases in general, there have nevertheless been a number of excellent games that will enhance the Amiga's popularity and-

David Williams, Fort William, [aptly enough]

We know Dave, we know, we've already done it mate, but thanks for the thought anyway. Ooooooh, because we never do that at the start of every year, oh no...

THE AQUATIC GAMES

Millennium

Reviewed by Carly Davies, Nuneaton

This game stars James Pond at the centre, but it's different from the usual James Pond games because it isn't a platformer, but a comedy sports game in which you take part in a lot of different events such as Sponge Jumping and The Water Sprint. It's better than a normal sports game because the events are more fun to take part in. You are awarded points for each event and get the chance to go away with a medal if you win the whole thing. James Pond is the character you control, by the way.

Summary: Good fun, and better than just an average platformer.

BENEATH A STEEL SKY

Virgin

Reviewed by Neil Butcher, Fife

There are good sides and bad sides to Beneath a Steel Sky. Firstly, if you only have £15 to spend and want an excellent game then you're quids in, because this is as good as adventures get on the Amiga. Secondly though, if you don't have a hard drive, or at the very least an external drive, then you'll be pulling your hair out because it is literally Disk Swap City. The graphics are brilliant and the text is almost always either amusing or informative, and the minimum of waffle means that Steel Sky moves along at a cracking pace and keeps you engrossed until – if you reach it – the end.

Summary: A lot of disks, but a lot of game too.

ARCADE POOL

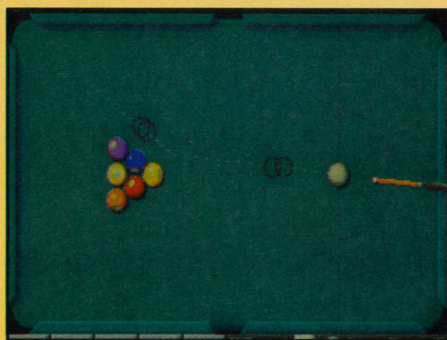

Team 17

Reviewed by Nathan Danielson, Newcastle [But we don't know which one...]

Arcade Pool is one of the few games of this kind on the Amiga, the last one being Archer Maclean's Pool way back in 1991. A brief (two second) glance at the manual is all you need to become au fait with everything this game has to offer, and then it's straight into playing it. Viewed from the side of the table, Arcade Pool allows various kinds of play, from the usual UK to weird US rules, and you can even choose an authentic sounding pub soundtrack if you like. The only problem is lining up your shot. The angle takes some getting used to, and even then it's a case of slight guess work. But what the hell! If you're fed up of bikers chucking you off the pool table at your local pub, you could do a lot worse than this. And you don't have to pay for a drink either.

Summary: Nice, but no cigar [Not "close" then, no...?]

CHAMPIONSHIP MANAGER, IT'S NEARLY HERE!...

DOMARK WILL MANAGE IT BY END OF FEB

If those thousands of you sitting at home, dribbling and convulsing at yet another Championship Manager-less month can lay aside the pill bottles, cut-throat razors and those funny leather things that hold snooker balls which you put in your mouth that perverts wear, for just a while longer, you'll find that appeasement is, at long last, on its way. Championship Manager 2 should – and this is official – “Be out by the end of February”.

As Domark's Paul Fox explained to our intrepid Scoop Hound, the Amiga version of what is already a smash hit on the PC has taken what some consider to be a surprisingly long time to convert, because of the level of detail the programmers are committed to including. Of course Clive Tyldesley's voiced commentary will have to be sacrificed, and production costs decree that Domark can't run to the hundred-odd disks necessary to hold pictures of every single league ground, so it'll be selected ones only. These were just the icing on the PC cake though, so it's no great loss, and it's good news to hear that every element of the incredibly detailed matches will be left largely untampered with.

Unfortunately, because of the ridiculous hours the programmers are keeping, Amiga screenshots aren't due to arrive until after this mag leaves for the printers, so you'll have to make do with these obvious 'not Amiga screenshots'. And remember, if you see similar ones in the review, then you'll know we've reviewed the PC version 'again' – because ooooooooooh! we're forever doing that.

WAIT FOR AGES, TWO COME AT ONCE ETC...

As flight sims go, Amiga purists tend to agree that none compare with the monster Airbus. Packed to the hilt with literally hundreds of fiddly dials, a control system which when learned virtually qualifies you as a pilot, and a manual thicker than a Shaggy Sandwich, it is the most detailed way of flying on the Amiga. And now it's back! In sequel form.

Using the same game engine, A320 Airbus 2 is released through Mirage Technologies and boasts a host of new features such as authentic aerodrome and navigation facilities for even greater 'realness'. It's been in the office for a good few days now, but we're only on page 44 of the manual and will therefore have to bring you the review next month...

It'll be a while before this bugger goes in the drive, we're telling you

GAMES GO DOWN IN HISTORY

Although it houses in the region of 275,000 items, there are many 'lost treasures' in terms of film and television programmes which the British Film Institute has resigned itself to never rediscovering. It is partly due to this that it has decided to start early with its collection of computer and videogames, to ensure that the same thing doesn't happen with the latest format of the moving image. And your help is needed! If you don't mind...

If you have any ancient old efforts stowed away – maybe you're using them as coffee mats or something – particularly for the Dragon 32, BBC Micro, Texas T1994A, Sharp M2700 [Do what?] Vic 20, Jupiter Ace, Atari VCS and, er, Coleco Vision, which you think are worthy of immortalising, contact Tony Hetherington at the BFI, 21 Stephen Street, London W1P 2LN.

James Pond: kids 100 years from now will say, "Mummy, what's so funny about a fish?"

NOT EXACTLY GAME NEWS

... But that's never stopped us before, and it won't now. See Blitz Basic? Well that's the 'thing' on which games such as Skidmarks and, er, Super Skidmarks were programmed. In fact it was even developed by Acid Software, that's how good it is. And now it's been updated, and comes to your local shop in a newly packaged form under the name of Blitz Basic v2.1. It is, to quote the box, "... the one essential development tool for the Amiga," and it could be yours for just 30 notes. Oh hang on, that'd make it £150. Thirty quid it is. Yes, thirty quid.

OTM, recently famous for bringing us the, er, playable Virtual Karts, has possibly the fullest Amiga release schedule of the year with, well, what seems to be 'quite a few games' to be honest.

Atrophy and Watch Tower are set for release in February – they're only available on the A1200, but then the A500 is 10 years old and it's not like PC owners expect Hexen to run on their 086 is it? Hmm, Watch Tower is a 'Commando-style arcade war game', viewed from a top-down perspective, which boasts a simultaneous two-player mode and loads of levels of all-out action involving armed enemy vehicles and aircraft.

Atrophy, on the other hand, is a back-to-basics-only-better horizontally scrolling graphical extravaganza of a shoot'em-up which – get this – will also be available on CD32. And there are a couple of others as well, but we'll save those till next month because news is a bit thin on the ground.

Top-down: only this is Skeleton Krew, not Watch Tower

And Mixed Doubles Champs allows you to choose from eight male and eight female players and hammer around accordingly. Priced at a wallet-friendly seven dabs 99 each, they're on the go NOW, and can be purchased either by ringing Audiogenic on 0181 424 2244, or by writing to Unit 27, Christchurch Industrial Centre, Wealdstone, Harrow, HA3 8NT. Imagine it like this, only with ladeez. Or a ladeez/bloke combo.

BERNIE BATER, NET SLATER

I said to a 21-year-old male college student from Massachusetts: "Hey man, you're a real weener."

He ignored me.

*I said to him: "Hey, pecker head, don't ignore me you mutha*a."*

He said to me: "Say something intelligent and I won't."

I said to him: "Yo mama done the neighborhood and she smokes crack."

He ignored me.

*I said to him: "Hey you c"*

And then I got kicked off.

More net slating with Bernie next month.

NEXT MONTH

The April issue of Amiga Action will be on sale at the tremendously convenient date of February 26. In it will be reviews of A320 Airbus 2, and, hopefully, Championship Manager 2, Tracksuit Manager 2 and possibly the next generation of Gloom games. And maybe another tennis game as well. On it will be three monsta disks packed to half-full with hot, hot demos and – oh yes! – ANOTHER FULL GAME. Do not miss out. Really, don't.

The staff here at Amiga Action love each and every one of our readers, and that's why we include a fax number and address, either one of which you can contact us on. However, none of us have hands, and find it impossible to left up a telephone receiver, so therefore any attempt to reach us via this medium can only be described as futile.

Thank you
